“ One of my favorite memories with John goes all the way back to a fishing trip in Canada. My dad had just caught three big carps and hooked them onto the fish chain. John, being John, couldn't resist messing around with them. Next thing we hear is, “Ohhh shit!” — and we look over to see the fish swimming away... still attached to the chain.

My dad's thumb knuckle had gone straight into his mouth, and he started mumbling a whole storm of Maltese words none of us could translate fast enough. Meanwhile, John was already halfway down the shoreline yelling, “I didn't mean it!” and he ran like a rabbit that just heard a shotgun click, while my dad was tossing pebbles at him shouting, “I told you to leave it alone!”

John ran so fast that day, and I laughed so hard I couldn't breathe. It's one of those memories that still makes me smile — pure John, pure chaos, pure heart.

And now I picture him with our dad again — the two of them standing by some heavenly lake, Dad giving him that side-eye and saying, “John... don't start your shit,” and John already pretending he's just looking at the fish chain like he's innocent. Same story, new location.

My heart will always miss him. I'll miss his laugh, his trouble, his big heart, all of it. But knowing he's with our dad now gives me a little peace — the two of them together again, probably arguing, probably laughing, probably driving each other crazy in the same old way. A part of me is broken without him, but another part is grateful they're side by side. And I'll carry them both with me for the rest of my life. My heart misses you already John love Susan xoxo

“ *My Dearest brother John,
I never thought your life with end so suddenly.
I know how much you loved your wife, family, mom. myself and our sister Susan.
I still hear your laugh and see your smile.
Your took a piece of my heart with you and forever you will be in mine. Oneday I will see you again and I'll hear your laughter and see your smile again.
Love you always;
