“ Since my childhood, when I personally saw John Hindle save the life of a drowning boy, he was always a hero in my eyes. As an adult, I admired him all the more, for having such a loving family. Sincere condolences to each of his family and dear friends.
Sincerely, George Broadhead

That's is crazy that you said this because during his last days he would have nightmares about a kid drowning and he always said I saved him and then would tell us to check on the kids and now I know why he would say this
